CREATING A DISTINCTIVE PRESENCE

Can you please share with us the journey that led you into the captivating world of fashion modeling? We'd love to hear about your background and experiences.

I have always been completely infatuated with the world of fashion since I was a little girl. I honestly don't know how I began to be so in love with it, growing up in the Pacific north west there wasn't much of it for me to be exposed to. But I remember some of my earliest childhood memories involving me dressing myself and my toys and having my mom sit and watch the show. As I grew older I started to sketch out my own designs and bug my mother non-stop to let me model. Though there was not much modeling that could be done in my small town, one day when I was 15 after school she surprised me. A talent agency was in town and she had registered me to audition! I was overwhelmed with happiness and excitement and when we got there I was even more overwhelmed because although

I loved fashion I would have never thought the world of fashion would love me back. I was offered a contract I did not end up taking but this gave me immense hope for the future. A few years later, 2 weeks after my 18th birthday I packed my single suitcase and my cat up and flew to Los Angeles. I knew nobody there and I was truly on my own for the first time in my life. You'd expect me to be scared but truly I wasn't. You could say I have too much confidence and I might even agree but it works for me. I knew then with just my determination and dedication I would do it and nobody could stop me. Yes, I had my own share of the "dark side" of the fashion world but that was not going to stop me. It took some time and many trials and errors but I finally came up with a plan that went better than I could have hoped for. After working with an agency that just wasn't the right fit for me I had done my research and found my top 3 that I would apply to. I had planned to do it the next morning but before I could I had woken up to one of them reaching out to me! Within just an hour of that, I had tons of test shoots being set up for me to build my portfolio. I was gleaming with gratitude and had finally felt that my hard work was paying off. Fast forward to now, I am smiling as big as ever while answering interview questions for my very first magazine publica-
