CREATING A DISTINCTIVE PRESENCE

Can you please share with us the journey that led you into the captivating world of fashion modeling? We'd love to hear about your background and experiences.

I have always been completely infatuated with the world of fashion since I was a little girl. I honestly don't know how I began to be so in love with it, growing up in the Pacific north-west there wasn't much of it for me to be exposed to. But I remember some of my earliest childhood memories involving me dressing myself and my love and having my mom sit and watch me grow. As I grew older I started to learn but my own designer and say my mother was also what I remember. Though there was not much modeling that could be done in my small town ever day when I was in high school she surprised me. A talent agency was in town and she had registered me to audition. I was overwhelmed with happiness and excitement and when we got there I was even more determined because all through

I loved fashion I would have never thought the world of fashion would love me back. I was offered a contract I did not end up taking but this gave me the motivation for the future. A few years after 2 weeks after my 18th birthday I packed my single suitcase and my cat up and flew to Los Angeles. I knew nobody there and I was truly on my own for the first time in my life. You decided me to be scared but only I wasn't. You could say I have too much confidence and I might even agree but it works for me. I knew there was just my determination and dedication I would do it and nobody could stop me. Yes, I had my own share of that "dark side" of the fashion world but that was not going to stop me. I took some time and many trials and errors but I finally came up with a plan that went better than I could have hoped for. All for working with an agency that just wasn't the right fit for me. I had done my research and found my top 3 that I would apply to. I had planned to get there the morning but before I could I had woken up to one of them running out home. Within just an hour of time I had bags of best shoes being set up for me to build my portfolio. I was planning with one shoe and had already felt that my next work was paying off. Fast forward to now I am smiling as big as ever with the answer to my shoe questions for my very first magazine public.
